Former NU regent indicted for years of defrauding loan

SCOTT STEWART
NEWS EDITOR

David Hergert, the man impeached from the University of Nebraska Board of Regents in 2006, now faces 18 counts of bank fraud, according to an indictment released last week.

The indictment, handed down by a grand jury in February, accuses Hergert of defrauding First National Bank of Omaha "by means of materially false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises."

In 2000, Hergert received a $3 million revolving loan from First National for his Scottsbluff, Neb., business, Hergert Milling Inc.

The borrowing base for the loan consisted of a formula involving the company's grain inventory, eligible accounts receivable and other inventory.

Under the conditions of the loan, Hergert was required to file monthly reports on the status of the borrowing base to calculate whether there was a deficiency in the collateral for the loan.

DAVID HERGERT

A deficiency and other factors might have compelled First National to take action to protect their security and financial interests with the loan.

To avoid such repercussions, the indictment alleges, Hergert "would then direct employees to fraudulently and materially manipulate" the borrowing base reports to inflate the asset values of Hergert Milling Inc.

The effect of the fraudulent reports was that First National made funds available to the company when the company "in fact, did not have sufficient collateral to support the Outstanding Loan Balance, pursuant to the terms of the Loan Agreement."

This, in turn, resulted in First National's inability "to take steps to protect its security and financial interests under the terms of the Loan Agreement."

The indictment charges 69-year-old Hergert with 18 counts of bank fraud, one for each of the 18 instances between January 2000 and December 2006 where Hergert is alleged to have falsified the value of the collateral.

Each count carries a maximum penalty of 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine. Hergert will be tried in the U.S. District Court of Nebraska in Lincoln.

Students tired of listening to sounds of drills and hammers in the Criss Library while they're studying are in luck.

UNO has partnered with local ceramic artist Jun Kaneko for a new venture in creativity: the Kaneko-UNO Library.

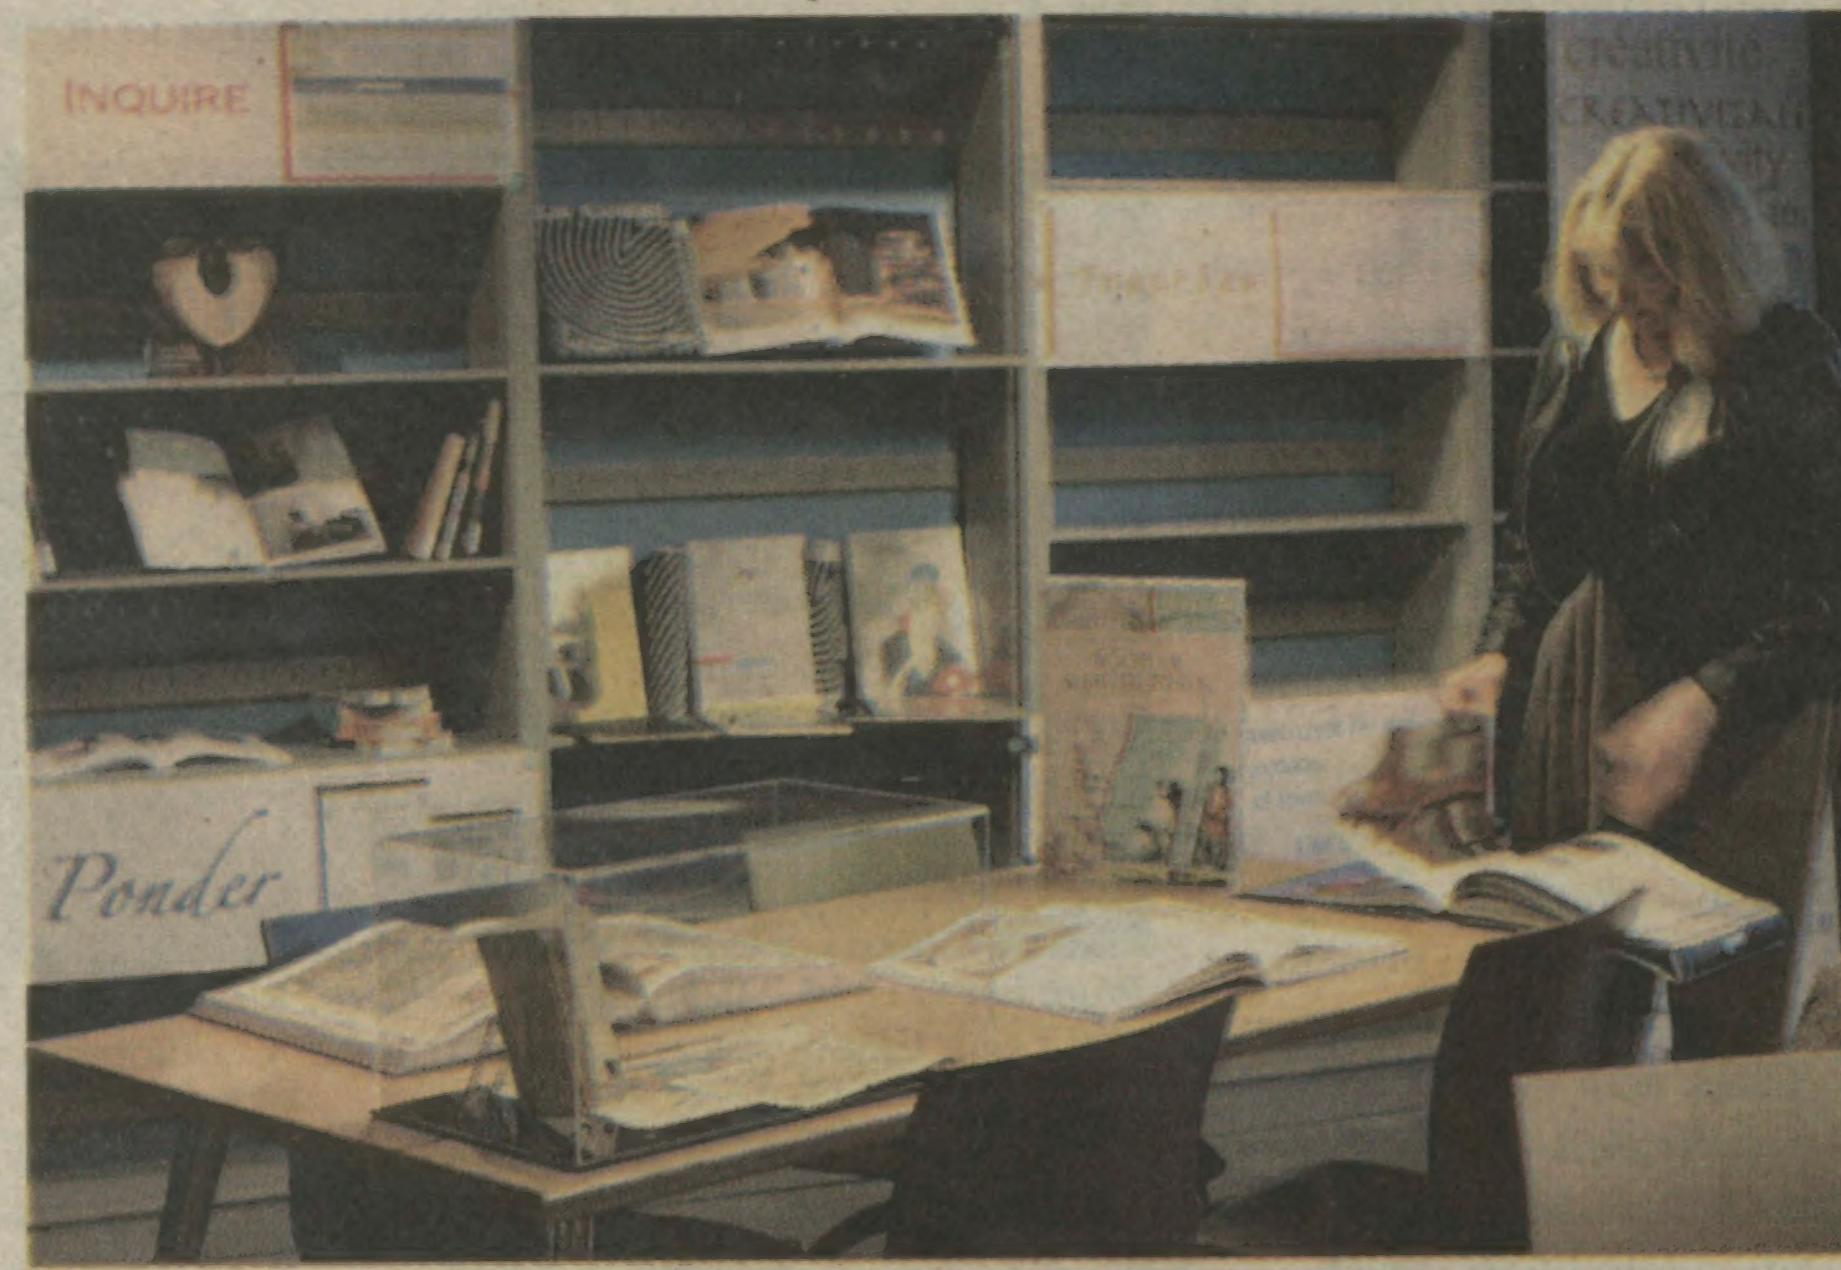

The library, which took six months to construct, is located at 1111 Jones St. in the Old Market. The area will cater to UNO students as well as local artists, engineers and business professionals.

"It's communication through new technology," Mark Mack, head architect of the library project, said via video conferencing. "[It] gives Omahans the ability to talk with the most creative people in the world."

The Kaneko-UNO Library is located in the Kaneko creativity center, which is a 64,000-square-foot, $10 million project. The center aims to help Omaha become a national leader in innovation with its use of direct media.

Executive Director Hal France said he's happy to be partnering with UNO.

"It's a place that will grow with us," France said.

The media and public were invited to browse the Kaneko-UNO Library during an open house Saturday. (JOE SHEARER/THE GATEWAY)

The Kaneko-UNO Library incorporates natural lighting in a modern setting.

"The library has a lot to do with openness; the windows enable us to pull the outside in," Mack said.

The library was developed by a group effort from local and international architects and other members of the community including Mack, France, Bill Stott and Criss Library Dean Steve Shorb, as well as the vision of founders Ree and Jun Kaneko.

The Kaneko library will eventually carry 10,000 books, DVDs and audio recordings as tools for research.

For now, however, the library features select pieces that are rare and unique as the center gradually builds its collection. Examples include an encyclopedia about a fictitious world, a book titled "The Art of African Masks" and 400 year-old maps.

"It will bring all sectors working together to enhance students potential ... new ideas, new products, for a bright future," Shorb said.

The space will serve as an extension of the Criss Library's collection, offering students opportunities for research and development in a cutting edge environment.

Although the full Kaneko project won't be completed until 2010, the center is already hosting community events.

The next event is a presentation by internationally renowned creativity expert Ken Robinson, who will speak as part of the Kaneko Great Minds Series on Feb. 26 at 7 p.m.

His presentation, "The Element: How Finding Your Passion Changes Everything," tells stories of the world's most accomplished people, explaining how creativity can be found and how society interprets it.

Commission gives preliminary OK to increased fees for Gateway

CAITRIN SHIRAZI
SENIOR STAFF WRITER

The Student Activities Budget Commission convened Monday with the final student agencies requesting funding. Commission members heard and discussed requests for Student Government's contingency fund, The Gateway and Maverick Productions at the meeting.

Matt Nelson, Student Government chief administrative officer, came before the commission again to present the contingency fund request.

The contingency fund is analogous to a checking account for the organization, Nelson said.

"It is a checking account per se, but we have to go through a committee and through the senate," Nelson said. "Both have to approve before anyone can access it."

The fund sponsors Student Government expenditures such as buses to home hockey games, artwork, recycling bins and management for the campus.

In the previous year, the contingency fund also covered costs for promotional items for Student Government and helped the Network for disAbled Students agency cover expenses during the summer. This year, however, promotional items have been moved to another line item and will no longer be covered by the fund.

"We spent quite a large chunk of our portion this fiscal year early in July," Nelson said. "We bought some items for NdS to help them out."

Nelson requested $10,000 for the fund, an increase of $300 from last year. The commission members approved the request passed unanimously.

Scott Stewart, news editor of The Gateway, spoke next on behalf of UNO's student publication.

While The Gateway takes in revenue from advertising, the money received by the paper is not enough to cover production costs.

The publication is requesting additional dollars to cover decreasing advertising revenue resulting from the current recession.

In total, The Gateway requested $99,000 in student fee support from the commission, a $12,332 increase from last year. In addition, the paper is expecting to generate $105,916 in advertising revenue.

The paper's budget is broken down into two areas, personal salaries and operating expenses. The request for funds to cover personnel salaries totaled $135,494, an increase of $1,387, and $66,452 was requested for operating expenses, an increase of $2,624 from last year's allocation.

Following the presentation, Stewart and Editor in Chief Taylor Muller took questions from the members of the commission.

When asked why The Gateway was distributed twice a week and not just once, Stewart said the paper could not change to a weekly without negatively impacting the timeliness of the stories covered.

Stewart also said the Internet is "dicey" when it comes to advertising, which limits the publication's room for growth online.

"The Dailyer Nebraskan, a satirical student paper out of Lincoln, has had terrible problems with getting advertising after going online," Stewart said.

Stewart and Muller were asked why the request for personnel salaries was so high and why the staff of The Gateway needed to be paid for work considered to be "part of the college experience."

They said The Gateway's salaried personnel work full days, often working more than 10 hours each on the production of each issue. "In the long run, we end up making less than minimum wage," Muller said.

Other commission members voiced opinions favoring the

Two students earn scholarships from Munroe-Meyer Institute

SCOTT STEWART

Two UNO students received scholarships from the Munroe-Meyer Institute at the University of Nebraska Medical Center earlier this month.

Michaela Schenkelberg and Lydia Clark were awarded the Rhoda Davis-Blatt scholarships for their support of the institute and to further their education.

"I absolutely love my job and the staff, volunteers and participants that I work with," Schenkelberg said. "I was very excited and honored to be one of the recipients because I am sure there were many other wonderful applicants, too."

Davis-Blatt worked as an administrative coordinator for the Munroe Foundation for nearly 30 years and was present to award Schenkelberg and Clark with their checks.

Schenkelberg is an exercise science sophomore who plans to attend physical therapy school following graduation. Her experience with the recreation therapy department made her want to work with children with disabilities.

Clark is a speech pathology junior who plans to continue her studies at UNO after graduation. The award Clark received was for $200, she said, which she plans to use the money to support her education at UNO this semester.

Both Clark and Schenkelberg volunteered since high school in the Munroe-Meyer Institute's Recreational Therapy Department.

"In the Recreational Therapy Department, we offer programs for children and adults with disabilities, ages 2-and-a-half up to 65 years," Schenkelberg said.

The after-school programs, summer camps, morning camps, adult programs, social clubs and other activities conducted by the department have given Clark and Schenkelberg the opportunity to meet many new faces.

Above all, though, they said it was the children of the Munroe-Meyer Institute that made the work really worthwhile.

"The kids at MMI have helped me to see the whole world more positively," Clark said.

Schenkelberg agrees with Clark that working with the children at Munroe-Meyer has had a positive impact on her life.

"I want to focus my career on working with individuals with disabilities, especially children, because they are such an inspiration to me," Schenkelberg said. "I just want to work towards helping to improve their lives the best I can."

News Brief: Two lectures to be simulcast on campus

The Nebraska Humanities Council will sponsor simulcast lectures at UNO's campus in March as part of the 2008-09 E.N. Thompson Lectures on World Issues.

The first lecture, "Notes from Afghanistan," will be given by Sarah Chayes, who has lived and worked in Afghanistan since 2001. Chayes, a former correspondent for National Public Radio, currently works for Arghand, a cooperative producing skin-care products from local fruits, nuts and botanicals.

The second lecture will be given by Michael Olivas and Vernon Briggs on "Illegal Immigrants: Path to Citizenship?" Olivas, the William B. Bates distinguished chair of law at the University of Houston, and Briggs, professor emeritus in the School of Industrial and Labor Relations at Cornell University, will discuss effectiveness of a path to citizenship for illegal immigrants.

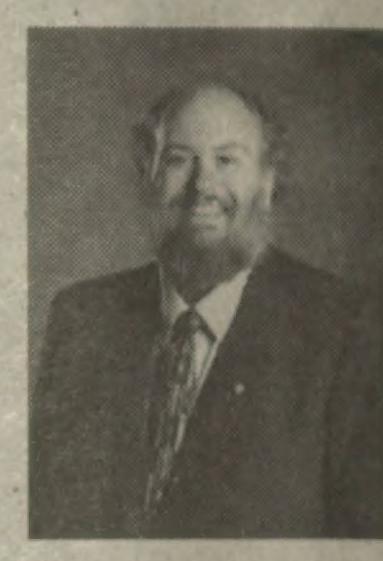

The lectures will take place at the Lied Center for Performing Arts in Lincoln, but will be simulcast at locations across the state.

At UNO, Chayes' lecture will be broadcast on March 4 at 7 p.m. in the Milo Bail Student Center Ballroom. Olivas' and Briggs' lecture will be March 25 at 7 p.m. in the Collaborating Commons (Room 132) of the College of Public Affairs and Community Services Building.

Metro may face funding losses after removal from association

SCOTT STEWART
NEWS EDITOR

Metropolitan Community College might face problems receiving state funding after being removed from the state community college association earlier this week.

On Monday, the Nebraska Community College Association voted 10-2 to expel Metro from the association for refusing to pay its 2009 annual membership dues.

Metro protested paying dues because it alleges the association has failed to provide equity among the state community colleges and did not represent Metro's interests before the Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education and the Nebraska Legislature.

"Today's action is not in the best interest of Nebraska's community colleges. We have presented alternatives, which the association has refused to discuss," said Randy Schmailzl, Metro's interim president, said in a statement. "Removing Metro from the association should not have an effect on state aid to Metro."

The Metro Board of Governors, which met Tuesday and discussed the removal, said in a statement it was committed to serving its students by lobbying the Nebraska Legislature for equity in the funding formula.

A proposal introduced in the Nebraska Legislature's Education Committee by Sen. John Harms of Scottsbluff, Legislative Bill 655, seeks to require membership in the Nebraska Community College Association to be eligible to receive state funds.

If the Legislature passes the bill, the proposal would cut off millions of dollars in state support for Metro until it rejoined the association.

Harms is a former president of Western Nebraska Community College (1976-2006) and McCook Community College (1973-76), and he is a current member of the American Association of Community Colleges. A public hearing on the bill is scheduled for March 3 in Lincoln.

Two other proposals pertaining to the community college aid dispute will also be considered at the March 3 hearing, which will be held in Room 1525 of the State Capitol Building at 1:30 p.m.

The first, LB 673, is an emergency act introduced by Sen. Scott Price of Bellevue to fund the community colleges at the same level as the last biennium, circumventing the application of the new community college aid allocation formula.

The second, LB 400, was introduced by Sen. Scott Lautenbaugh of Omaha to extend the previous formula for another year by amending the enactment dates for the formulas under the Community College Foundation and Equalization Aid Act.

A third proposal by Sen. Tanya Cook of Omaha, LB 340, would require the Nebraska Coordinating Commission for Postsecondary Education to make a one-time evaluation of the current community college funding formula and make recommendations on it.

The public hearing for LB 340 was held on Jan. 15.

efforts of Stewart and Muller.

"Money means accountability," said commission member Dayton Headlee, who has written columns for The Gateway. "It's an incentive to do your job well when you can be fired from it."

After the discussion, the request passed 5-0 with two abstentions.

"I don't want to vote against this but I don't feel I know enough about it to vote for it," said commission member Meredith Bacon.

Maverick Productions presented last Monday and was represented by Director Hope Vavra and Treasurer Marshal McGovern. Its budget is divided into operational and programming accounts.

Maverick Productions is responsible for entertainment programming at UNO, including campus events, comedians and bands.

Highlights from last year include 15 scheduled events such as the centennial homecoming week competitions, events and culminating dance; the hosting of comedians Tracy Morgan and Steve Hoffstetter; as well as the Eve 6 concert.

"This year we're looking for quality over quantity," Vavra said. "We would much rather have eight awesome events than 15 OK events."

The organization also underwent a name change last year from Student Programming Organization, or SPO, to Maverick Productions, Vavra said. The move was intended to lessen confusion and to create a stronger sense of identity within the campus as well as the organization.

For the 2009-10 academic year, Maverick Productions is announcing the addition of 14 new members to Maverick Productions and the hiring of a media and Web specialist.

Vavra said she believes the additions will help increase participation not only within the agency but also in the UNO community as a whole.

Maverick Productions' administrative expenses have increased from the $19,230.20 allocated last year to $21,000, with the increased $1,779.80 said to go towards a better secretary salary, board development and National Association for Campus Activities membership dues.

Programming expenses for the organization have also increased from the $105,000 allocated in the 2008-09 academic year to $127,500.

The $22,500 increase will go toward expenses for all Maverick Productions committees, an increased budget for large-scale events and a $3,000 budget for the media and Web specialist.

The members of commission voted and the request for funds for Maverick Productions passed unanimously.

The concern was raised, however, that student fees would have to increase dramatically in order for all of the agencies that presented to receive the funding they requested.

"Student fees have gone up steadily for the last few years but with good reason," said Shari Tangeman, Student Government's executive treasurer and chair of the commission.

Tangeman said the university has been undergoing changes to make the campus more accessible and inviting for students and said the agencies help with this transition.

"There are more dorms on campus now and the university is trying to reach out to the students," said Tangeman. "These agencies give students more things to do and get involved in."

The budget commission will meet for the final time Monday to finalize the allocations of funds to the student agencies heard from in the five preceding weeks. Wade Robinson, associate vice chancellor of student affairs, as well as representatives from all student agencies seeking funds will be in attendance.

After the commission makes its recommendations, the Student Senate will vote on the allocations Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Milo Bail Student Center Council Room.

Monday's commission meeting will begin at 3 p.m. and is expected to last a minimum of two hours.

"Don't make dinner reservations," Headlee said.

Men's basketball finishes week 1-1 against top foes

ZACH SEASTEDT
CONTRIBUTOR

The regular season may be coming to a close, but that's no reason for a lull in the schedule for the men's basketball team.

Coming off of an 11-point win at Truman State the week before, the Mavericks (16-9, 10-8 Mid-America Intercollegiate Athletics Association) entered last week having to face two of the top teams in the MIAA.

On Feb. 18, the Mavericks defeated No. 7 Central Missouri 81-71.

Saturday, the team traveled to Bolivar, Mo., to take on No. 4 Southwest Baptist, but ultimately lost 85-98.

Coach Derrin Hansen said that despite the intense competition, game preparation remains the same.

"You just have to do what you have to do to be successful, doesn't matter who you play," he said. "You're always trying to take away a team's strengths. You try to do things that can work for you."

On that first night, the Mavericks earned their first spot in the MIAA. Championship Tournament after defeating Central Missouri in the Sapp Fieldhouse.

Senior guard Michael Jenkins led the Mavs in scoring with 23 points and 8 rebounds, shooting 4-of-5 from the land of three. Sophomore guard Mitch Albers had 18 points, junior guard Andrew Bridger scored 11 and junior forward Dion Curry finished with 16 points off the bench, going 4-for-4 from the field.

The Mavericks got off to a hot start, leading Central Missouri by 10 less than five minutes into the game. The lead would not last long, with the Mules responding with a 13-to-3 run to tie the game with little more than nine minutes in the half.

After six lead changes, Jenkins hit a 3-pointer with four seconds left, giving the Mavs a 37-34 lead at halftime.

Following a rough start in the second half, UNO was down by as many as eight points.

A 17-to-7 run, capped off by Bridger's 3-pointer with 6:08 in the game, vaulted the Mavs into the lead for good. UNO was 9-for-10 from the line down the stretch.

Mules forward Sanjay Watts led all scorers with 32 points, shooting 12-of-14 from the field.

The win gave the Mavericks two in a row and some much needed momentum heading into Saturday's contest at Southwest Baptist.

"[The Bearcats] have won almost 30 games in a row at home, so you know they are ranked that high for a reason," Hansen said.

Unfortunately the team was unable to capitalize on an amazing shooting performance in the first half as UNO fell 98-85 to the Bearcats.

It was the 29th home victory for Southwest Baptist.

Albers led the Mavs in scoring with 20 points, 15 coming before halftime. Bridger dropped 18 points while junior forward Matt Newman had 12.

UNO shot a blistering 63 percent from the field in the first half, including 5-of-9 from beyond the arc en route to a one point lead at halftime.

The lead would disappear less than 10 seconds into the start of the second half with a dunk by Bearcats' Johnnie Harris. After a basket by Newman, the Bearcats answered with a 3-pointer by Tomas Brock.

A layup by senior forward Justin Peterson, who finished with 11 points, tied the game at 56 with 19:03 left in the game. This was the closest the Mavericks would get for the rest of the game.

"We had some missed shots and rim-outs," Hansen said. "Then we just couldn't keep up with the fast pace. They hit some tough shots."

UNO shot a dismal 35 percent from the field in the second half with Southwest Baptist shooting 56 percent. The Bearcats had a lead as large as 18 points.

Senior guard Wendell Martis led six Bearcats in double figures with 17 points. Senior center and forward Matt Rogers finished the game with 16 points and 14 rebounds.

The Mavericks finished with 25 total rebounds compared with Southwest Baptist's 40.

Despite the loss, the Mavericks find themselves in solid position with two games left in the regular season. Their next game is against Pittsburg State tomorrow at the Sapp Fieldhouse at 3:30 p.m.

"We have to use these last two games to catapult into a regional spot," Hansen said.

Mavs finish regular season with tie, record winless streak

Kemp: Season is 'ancient history' as team looks forward to CCHA playoffs

SCOTT STEWART
NEWS EDITOR

The Mavericks wrapped up the regular season Tuesday with a shootout win over non-conference rival Minnesota State, Mankato, to finish 13-15-8 overall and 8-13-7-3 in the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

The 2-2 tie and 2-1 shootout win was enough to snap a five-game UNO losing streak, but left the Mavs winless in their last 14 games (0-9-5) – the Mavs last win came on Jan. 9 against Northern Michigan.

With the season over, the Mavs are waiting to see whom they will be matched with in the first round of the CCHA Tournament.

Coach Mike Kemp said the regular season results were "ancient history" and that every opportunity still exists for the team to redeem the season by performing well in the playoffs.

"It's a totally new season," Kemp said. "Everyone's going into this 0-0-0."

UNO currently stands at seventh in the 12-school league. The crimson and white will have home ice for the first round unless Ferris State (12-15-7, 9-12-5-2 CCHA) picks up a point against Michigan (24-10-0, 18-8-0-0) and Western Michigan (10-17-7, 7-14-6-2) sweeps Bowling Green (11-20-3, 8-17-

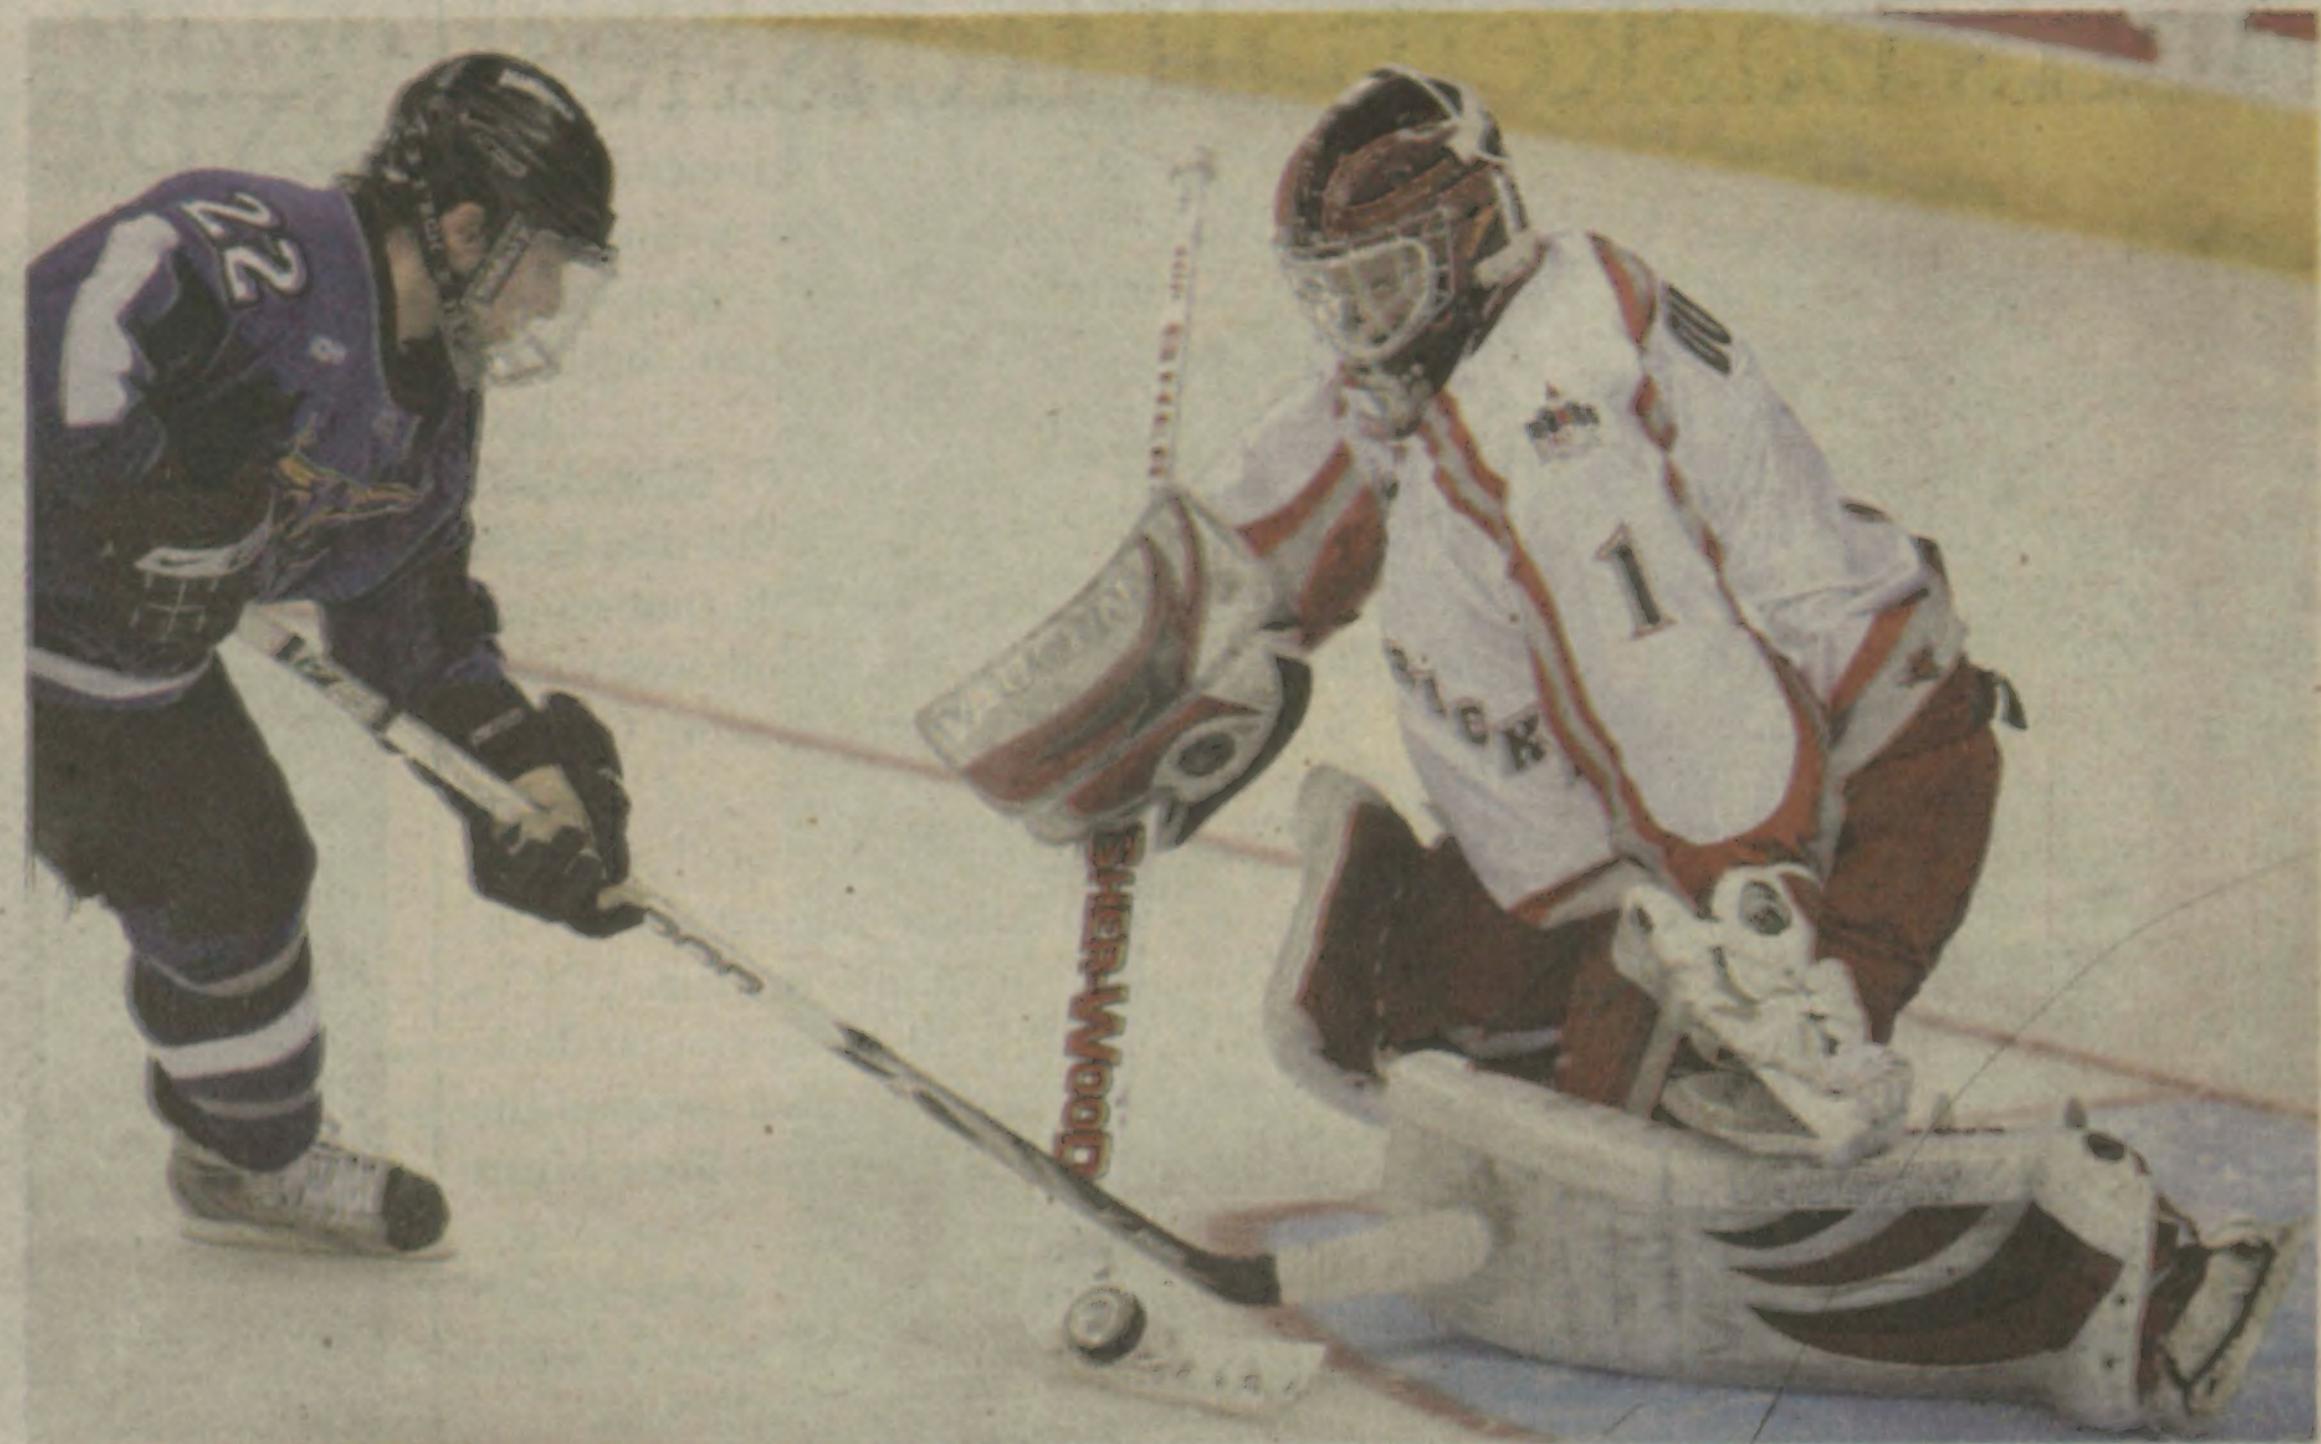

Mankato answered Purslow's goal on a power play with 1:15 remaining in the first period. Mankato forward Adam Mueller took advantage of the Maverick defensive line's failure to fall back into place, giving Mueller and Zach Harrison the chance to cross the puck in front of the net and beat UNO junior goaltender Jeremie Dupont.

Mankato capitalized on another power play at 15:50 in the second period, when Geoff Irwin scored only seven seconds into the play after the puck hit off a UNO player's skate, allowing Mick Berge to shoot and Irwin to chip the puck past Dupont.

Senior forward Tomas Klempa earned the tie for UNO at 13:51 in the third, picking up the rebound after Zacharias made an initial save on a shot from UNO freshman forward Alex Hudson.

While the result wasn't the 'W' the team wanted, Kemp said he likes the resiliency the Mavs showed and how the team built the pressure throughout the game. Nevertheless, the team still wasn't capitalizing opportunities as often as they should.

"We just don't get a bounce," Kemp said. "While it's frustrating, all things considered, I was proud of how our guys played."

The game was also a chance for the team to blow off some steam as they focus on the playoffs. Kemp said the team showed more lightness in step.

"I don't think they squeezed the stick too hard tonight," Kemp said.

UNO practiced Wednesday at the Qwest Center and Thursday at Tranquility Park, Kemp said. The team will work on scoring, its offensive transition and getting their game to a higher pace for the postseason.

The Mavs will take the weekend off to recharge their batteries while being idle during the final weekend of CCHA league play. The team will resume practice Monday to focus on preparing for their opponent in the first round of the CCHA Tournament.

"It's been a long season," Klempa said. "Now we just have to focus on the playoffs."

Tuesday's game completed an annual home-and-away series with the purple Mavericks of Minnesota State, Mankato. Mankato beat UNO 4-3 on their home ice on Jan. 3.

With the tie, the purple Mavs won the "Spirit of the Maverick" trophy, which the schools compete for each year. UNO had won the trophy last season after 4-2 win in Mankato, Minn.

Sophomore forward Rich Purslow led UNO to a quick lead over Mankato in the first period Tuesday, picking up the puck in the neutral zone and burying it into the right corner of the net past Mankato's Mike Zacharias at 6:30.

on the official outcome of the game. CCHA rules permit shootouts in non-conference games hosted by CCHA schools with mutual consent of the opponent.

After seven rounds, Hudson squeezed a puck through Zacharias' fingers, barely scoring the shootout-winning goal after Nick Fanto picked up a goal for UNO and Berge put one by Dupont for Mankato.

Although the result had no impact on standings, Hudson said the 14-game winless streak had been getting to the team mentally, but they felt better winning Tuesday's shootout. Klempa agreed, saying defenseman Eddie DelGrosso had called the result a "moral victory" for the team in the locker room.

Baseball team picks up steam as season starts

MICHELLE BISHOP

The UNO baseball team started the season off the right way, with a four-game sweep of host Colorado Christian Feb. 14-16.

UNO then traveled to Warrensburg, Mo., Feb. 20-22 to take part in the Holiday Inn Classic hosted by the University of Central Missouri. The Mavs split a doubleheader with Winona State University and defeated Upper Iowa University.

"We left a lot of runners on base, but our pitchers put us in position to win. We'll try to pitch a little better, hold base runners a little bit better, run the bases a little bit better," Coach Bob Herold said. "We couldn't get them home. No man left behind is what we're trying for."

The Mavs will next head to Winterhaven, Fla., this weekend to play in the RussMatt Tournament, taking on the University of Tampa yesterday.

UNO will then face Hillsdale College on Friday in a double-header.

Tomorrow, UNO faces Gannon University at 10 a.m. and then Kentucky Wesleyan on March 1 at 11:45 a.m. On March 2 the Mavs face Grand Valley State in a double-header and wrap up the tournament on March 3 against West Virginia Wesleyan at 8:30 a.m.

"We have our hands full right out the gate. We try to play the toughest schedule we can play," Herold said. "I'm looking forward to all of them ... each team gives us experience and makes us a little bit better."

The games versus Tampa, Gannon, Kentucky Wesleyan and the first game of the double-header against Hillsdale can all be heard live on the Mavericks' Web site, omavs.com.

Feb. 14 - Game 1: Nebraska-Omaha 9, Colorado Christian 6

UNO jumped out to a 1-0 lead in the second inning and put up eight runs during the fifth, sixth and seventh innings. In the fifth, Brian Goliber scored on a Matt Meyer sacrifice fly, while Evan Porter recorded the other RBI with a two-out single that drove in Travis Jacobi.

With the bases loaded in the sixth, both Klein and Schwab scored on an error by Colorado Christian shortstop Chad Barnhill.

In the seventh, UNO scored all four runs with two outs. With the bases loaded, Goliber hit a double that scored Klein and Schwab. Jacobi followed with a two-run single to center to score Goliber and Eikmeier.

Colorado Christian scored all of its runs in the last three innings, including four runs in the ninth to trim UNO's lead to 9-6. With the tying run on deck, UNO pitcher Brian Strawne escaped the jam by getting the Cougars' Brett Myatt to ground out to second.

Josh Warren finished 4-for-4 with two RBIs and two runs scored, while Chris Kessinger picked up the win.

Game 2: Nebraska-Omaha 11, Colorado Christian 2

Schwab and Goliber each went 2-for-4 with two runs scored and two RBIs to lead UNO.

The Mavs scored at least one run in the first four innings and added six in the seventh inning cruising to an 11-2 win.

Kyle Dahman, Wes Simmons and Adam Versendal pitched a combined six innings of scoreless ball to hold the Cougars to seven hits, while picking up four strikeouts. Dahman picked up the win.

Porter, Klein, Brady Hohl and Jacobi each recorded an RBI, while Warren tallied two.

Feb. 15 - Game 1: Nebraska-Omaha 3, Colorado Christian 1

Ben Percival, Paul Hansen and Andrew Martinez combined to pitch seven scoreless innings, giving up just one hit and striking out seven.

The Mavs grabbed the lead in the second inning off a Goliber sacrifice fly to center that brought home Klein.

UNO tacked on two more runs, one each in the fifth and eighth innings.

Klein's game-winning hit in the fifth, a two-out single, scored Strawne for the 2-0 lead. The Mavs added an insurance run in the top of the eighth after Jacobi scored on a sac fly from Klein.

Percival picked up the win, while Johnson earned UNO's first save of the season, pitching two innings with one strikeout and one earned run.

Game 2: Nebraska-Omaha 5, Colorado Christian 3

Five different Mavs tallied an RBI, while Porter, Klein and Warren each had multi-hit games.

UNO scored at least one run in the first four innings of play to secure their second sweep over the Cougars. After giving up three runs in the third inning, UNO held the Cougars to just one hit over the final four innings.

Tom Schmidt picked up the win and Justin Bruns was credited with the save after pitching a scoreless UNO men's and women's teams hosted their Graceland University counterparts last Friday at Hanscom Tennis Center, however, the results were nearly opposite with the women picking up the season's third win and a shutout on the men.

Losing only one singles match and sweeping the remaining singles and doubles, the women's team dominated Graceland in an 8-1 win. The men saw losses in all three doubles and all six singles matches. The closest they came to winning a set was at No. 4 singles with Matt Frost. He lost the first set 6-2, but almost came back in a 5-7 second set loss.

The women's team was a different story, only losing one match. Dropping the first match of singles, at No. 1, UNO's Kelsey Haas lost 1-6, 5-7. But from there on out, every set but one went to the Mavs.

UNO's No. 2 singles Heather Hotzman defeated Valeria Avina 6-3 and 6-4. No. 3 singles Mary Lausten picked up her win 6-2 and 6-2 against Graceland's Laura Barriga.

No. 4 singles was a battle between

UNO's Jenna Nielsen and Orsolya Magyar. Nielsen lost the first set 1-6, but rallied to win the second set 6-4. The tiebreaker went to UNO 10-5.

No. 5 singles Caitlin Christy, of UNO, dispatched her opponent, as well, winning 6-3 and 6-3. The final singles match followed, with UNO's Diana Dobey handily dispatching Carla Aguilera 6-2 and 6-4.

The Maverick women swept all doubles matches, sealing the notch in their collective belt and improving to 3-2 on the season.

UNO's No. 1 doubles team of captain Rachel Faulk and Haas picked up their third win, defeating Carolina Verzecoto and Valeria Avina 8-4. Continuing the Maverick dominance, No. 2 team of Kelsie Olson and Traci Moklestad picked up an 8-2 win against Laura Barriga and Magyar. No. 3 doubles of Samantha Thomas and Sara Wheeland handed a 8-1 defeat to Graceland's Taylor Johnson and Michelle McCabe.

The men dropped to 1-2 on the season and will play tomorrow against Doane College in Lincoln. The women will face Nebraska-Kearney on March 6 at 3 p.m.

Feb. 20 - Game 1: Winona State 8, Nebraska-Omaha 1

Winona State scored five runs over the fifth and sixth innings to hand UNO its first loss of the season. The Warriors capitalized on two UNO errors in the second inning, scoring three unearned runs off Kessinger (1-1). UNO finished with six errors that resulted in four unearned runs for Winona.

UNO scored its only run of the game in the third inning off an RBI single by Strawne that advanced Andrew Hansen. The Mavs finished with just three hits and went 1-for-12 with runners on base.

Game 2: Nebraska-Omaha 8, Winona State 5

UNO jumped out to an early lead, scoring three runs in the first inning. The Warriors tied the game at 3-3 in the second inning, scoring all three runs off bases-loaded walks. Paul Hansen came in for relief and induced his first batter to hit into an inning-ending double play.

The Mavericks regained the lead in the fourth inning, scoring four runs and adding an insurance run in the sixth inning. Brandon Dahl pitched a scoreless seventh inning to earn his first save of the season, while Paul Hansen picked up the win.

Feb. 22: Nebraska-Omaha 11, Upper Iowa 4

UNO collected nine hits in the first two innings to jump out to a 6-0 lead and never looked back. Jacobi gave the Mavs a 9-0 lead when he crushed a three-run, fifth inning home run to left center, scoring Goliber and Warren.

UNO added a run in the top of the seventh and eighth innings to extend the lead to 11-3. The Peacocks scored one final run in the bottom of the ninth, but would get no closer.

The Mavs pounded out 19 hits while helping Percival pick up his second win of the season. Jacobi hammered two home runs and collected five RBIs, while Eikmeier went 3-for-4 with three RBIs. Andrew Hansen and Porter each collected three hits.

If you like the comic, boycott the film

JOSH VEAZIE
THE CRIMSON WHITE

Don't tell me you can't judge a film by its trailer. Come on.

That's what trailers are - two-minute warnings about an upcoming film. That's why most people reading this have eight crisp dollar bills in their wallet they didn't spend seeing "Bride Wars."

Here are a few things I've noticed about the "Watchmen" trailer:

1. There's more violence in the trailer than there is in the entire book.
2. Every shot with Dr. Manhattan looks like a screensaver.
3. It's directed by Zack Snyder, famous for helming "300," a film about chiseled, shirtless Greeks roaming an artificial landscape in search of character development. It was mindless, exploitative, overblown, implicitly homophobic and depressingly one-dimensional in a time when this nation could've used a complex dialogue about war.

Snyder's film philosophy has two main points:

1. If it's worth doing, it's worth doing with computer-generated imagery.

2. Any human activity, from dueling tax evasion to taking a dump, is more captivating in slow motion. That's it. And Hollywood gave him the keys to one of Time's "100 Greatest Novels." Why? Because Hollywood is an unfeeling machine that runs on the tears of orphans and baby sea otters.

On March 6, the literary geeks of the world can send a loud message to Hollywood - just because it's a great book, that doesn't mean it shouldn't be translated into another medium. You can't just turn an award-winning, multi-dimensional, postmodern, metafictional story into two and a half hours of slow-motion somersaults and cleavage.

Perhaps the greatest homage to an innovative piece of art is not duplication, but merely admitting that it is "undoable." Please figure this out soon, because I don't want to be walking somewhere two years from now and see an advertisement for "The Brothers Karamazov 3-D Imax Experience." Though I admit, seeing the Grand Inquisitor with Ben Affleck and some Michael-Bay-produced explosions would be an interesting experience.

The Fray – "The Fray"

ANDREA BARBE
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Ever since The Fray's music popped up on the charts in 2005, this powerful band hit the ground running without looking back. Tunes like "Over My Head (Cable Car)" and "How to Save a Life" put The Fray on Billboard's Top 100 for weeks. Their latest self-titled release, which dropped nationwide Feb. 3, will no doubt follow their path of success.

These five rockers, all hailing from Denver, have changed up their album with more melancholy tracks rather than their typical radio-friendly ballads. While a few songs, like "Happiness" and "Enough for Now," are repeat-worthy, half are bland and tedious. This is particularly apparent in songs like "When" and "Ungodly Hour" with dreary melodies and sappy aftertaste that certainly won't keep you coming back for more.

However, lead singer Isaac Slade's vocals are still as strong and powerful as ever, displaying pain and emotion that very few artists can believably pull off.

Slade croons from the soul, tugging at the hearts of listeners. His vocal range is vast and he hits every note delicately, especially on the softer tracks.

What really sets The Fray apart is its heavy classical music influence with a pop twist. This fusion works well for the group. Their first single off the album, "You Found Me," is already on radio airwaves and was featured on last week's Billboard Hot 100 top ten list.

But it's Slade's voice, clever lyrics and flowing accompaniment that will make The Fray noteworthy for years to come.

The Loved Ones – "Distractions"

IAN DUNCAN
CONTRIBUTOR

There are on the music scene within the past few years that have managed to achieve mainstream success while maintaining credibility among even the most pessimistic and jaded punk-rock fans. The Loved Ones is one of these bands.

With a line-up that includes former Bouncing Souls roadie and Paint It Black member, Dave Hause, two former members of The Explosion, not to mention ex-members Michael Cotterman of Kid Dynamite and Zach Blair of Rise Against, their pedigree is safely intact.

"Distractions" is the second EP from The Loved Ones and their fourth release. The album includes three original songs and three covers, opening with "Distracted," a perfect example of punk rock and good, old-fashioned rock 'n' roll music that The Loved Ones have perfected over the years.

The next track, "Last Call," begins with a piano introduction before jumping into a quick-paced, power-pop tune. The final original song is "Spy Diddley," an outtake from their 2006 album "Keep Your Heart."

The last three tracks are the covers, which include Bruce Springsteen's "Johnny 99" from his renowned album, "Nebraska," and Billy Bragg's "Lover's Town Revisited." The album is rounded out by "Coma Girl," originally by the tragically overlooked Joe Strummer and the Mescaleros, the band Strummer was active in before he passed away in 2002.

Current fans of The Loved Ones will feel right at home with "Distractions." It also serves as a good introduction to the band. With the familiar cover songs and short length at just over 15 minutes, anyone can find time for a quick listen.
